

Blog Title: The 4 Biggest Benefits of Tankless Water Heater Installation in Madison

Is a Tankless Water Heater for You?

Tankless water heaters offer many cost and convenience benefits, but are they the right choice for you? Each individual and family has different needs and desires they need met to feel comfortable and productive in their homes. When it comes to water heaters, what's right for one, might not be ideal for the other.

Here are some questions to consider as you make your way through the decision-making process for your home water heating needs:

- Do you use less than 41 gallons of water per day? If not, you won't enjoy as many savings from a tankless heater, though you'll still cut energy use by 8 to 14 percent.
- Do you have ample space for installing a water heater? Tankless units can go anywhere, unlike storage tank water heaters which require three square feet of space or more.
- Can you afford the purchase of the unit and installation? It costs less to buy and install a new conventional water heater than a tankless model, but overall costs are higher in the long-run when you go the traditional route.
- How many people do you have living in your home? Will the tankless water heater be able to keep up with demand? While the tankless heaters provide immediate, steady streams of hot water, the supply is limited. Most hold several gallons of water—making it great for an individual's hot water needs or even a couple or small family's hot water needs. However, if you have a large family and want to run multiple showers/laundry/dishwasher at once, the tankless water heater might not be able to keep up.
- Will you stay in your home for a while longer? Tankless water heaters last longer than any other model available; it will be nice not to have to worry about a replacement in the near future.
- Do you plan to put your home up for sale? A tankless water heater can be an attractive feature to people looking for a new home; it's a great way to boost your home's functionality and energy-savings to help it stand apart of the rest.

It can be overwhelming as a homeowner to determine which type of water heater will meet the unique needs of your family and property. To ensure you are covering all the bases and asking all the right questions, you need a plumbing expert on your side to help you consider the pros and cons.

At Anthony Wimpey Plumbing, our professional plumbers are here to answer your questions and guide you through the decision-making process. Contact us now to determine whether a tankless water heater is right for your property.